

Richard Coombs

Richard is a partner with law firm Foot Anstey and has worked with family businesses for many years as a corporate lawyer. He specialises in advice to family businesses and corporate and commercial work with particular emphasis on succession planning and governance for family businesses.

Recently he assisted a large second generation family business decide on changes to their board structure, and a first generation engineering company on management and ownership succession.

He was appointed as one of the first Fellows of the International Centre For Families In Business and is a past Chairman of the Devon and Cornwall Branch of the Institute of Directors.

